CZECH PLANT LAGS IN MEETING PLAN

The Molotov Plant in Trinec fulfilled its operational plan by only 95.6 percent from January through August 1950. The factory management, as well as the party and the trade unions, decided that the plan figures were too high and that they could not be fulfilled. However, it was necessary to adjust the output of raw steel in 1951 to increased requirements, particularly of the heavy machine industry. The figures for 1951 were also considered to be incapable of fulfillment. For this reason these figures were reduced, but even the new figures were not accepted by the factory personnel.

Thereupon the party worked out a mobilization plan for Trinec which was directed mainly toward fulfilling the operational plan for 1950. While the mobilization plan was being carried out, it was discovered that bad organization of the work and the workers' distrust of the work norms were responsible for nonfulfillment of the 1950 operational plan, and for the refusal of personnel to accept the figures set for 1951.
